

1901 census records

The purpose of this list is to enable searchers to requisition the census enumeration books on microfilm by using reference numbers only.

The typed list forming the first part of the volume is the basic finding aid. It is arranged in alphabetical order of registration districts for the whole of Scotland. For convenience, printed particulars of the registration districts for 1901, and in numerical and county order (from north to south), are included after the typed list. These particulars are taken from the Registrar General's printed reports published shortly after the census was compiled.

The typed list can be used to identify the reference number for a particular registration district and the number of enumeration transcript volumes for that district. For example, the reference for Aberlady is 702 and there are 3 enumeration volumes.

Where footnotes indicate the existence of street indexes, these indexes should be consulted for the precise reference number of the enumeration book required. For example, the 1901 Edinburgh street index shows that the details for the Adelphi Hotel are given in district 685-4, enumeration book 7. The full reference would therefore be CEN 1901/685-4/7.

Sets of street indexes are available in each search room.
